The lunchtime facelift

Yes it is here... the thread lift procedure that promises to lift your sagging jowls, jaw line, brow and neck in a procedure that can be done in your lunch hour. We ask, "Are the days of the traditional facelifts numbered?" The thread lift is performed under local anaesthetic which means it is a walk-in walk-out procedure. Because it is much less invasive than a traditional facelift, the recovery is very swift with far less bruising and swelling, resulting in less "downtime". The cost of this treatment is significantly lower than full surgical facelifts...and that is good news too!

So how does it work?

This revolutionary lifting procedure uses a special thin needle to insert tiny threads under the facial tissues. One end of these miracle threads grab and lift the sagging skin whilst the other end anchor the skin to the rest of the tissues in the face. No extensive cutting is required and there are no telltale facelift scars. Thread lifts have been successfully used in other medical applications for many years.

Who is it suitable for?

The thread lift will appeal to the forty to fifty somethings who are not quite ready for a full facelift but want a confidence boosting lift all the same. It is also ideal for those who are not confident in undergoing the full surgical facelift or who do not want the scars associated with it. It is going to be great for those who lead busy lives and cannot afford the downtime of major facial surgery.

Celebrity hairdresser, Jonathan Yeardon of Colour and Cutting Crew began the New Year with a gift to himself by having liposuction at Mills & Mills Medical Group.

As a teenager, Jonathan always battled with his weight. He was described by the school dietician as morbidly obese and at 15 years of age and five feet six inches, he tipped the scales at 15 stone. He was very unhappy and was the constant victim of bullying at his all-boys school in Bradford, England. "It was horrendous," Jonathan explained, "I just didn't seem to fit in. I was the fat boy with the glasses and an easy target for the rugby playing boys at my school. Something had to be done. I dieted constantly but it didn't help - my weight didn't seem to alter much. Then when I was in my twenties, I discovered Weight Watchers. I changed my whole diet routine and the weight was at last falling off! I was encouraged to join a gym, and I have to say, I'm now slightly compulsive and hate to miss my thrice weekly visits and the weight has never returned. At 36 years old and 6 foot tall, I now weigh just over 12 stone.

stressed that for me, the results could be fairly limited. I was undeterred and booked myself in.

The clinic was amazing - it was like a 5-star hotel. I was incredibly nervous but I was treated like a king and nothing was too much trouble and the care and attention I received was beyond belief. I underwent the procedure and stayed overnight. My mind was put totally at ease as the nurses constantly checked on me to make sure I was comfortable during the night. Dr Vricella came to see me and said that he had managed to remove more fat than he'd expected to and that I should be thrilled with the results. Already I am and I feel that I have managed to rid myself of something that has plagued my whole life. I am terrified of hospitals but I cannot stress to you how wonderful the experience was. Mills & Mills are incredible and I want the world to know it!"
